

Ҷ ҷ	Ш ш	Ъ ъ	Э э	Ю ю	Я я
-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----

Notes to Cyrillic:

1. The letter ѣ never appears at the beginning of a word. Words beginning with ya-, yo- and yu-/yū-/yʉ- are written as я-, ё- and ю-, and the combinations are written in the middle of the word: viyóra is vuёpa [vĩ 'jo : ra].
2. Use of ѣ and ѥ is uncertain, but they seem to distinguish two similar-sounding words: иранка and ѣранка, рунак and рѣнак. Perhaps ѣ is also used as a stress marker as it is also in Tajik, and ѥ can also be used in Tajik loanwords to indicate a Tajik vowel ⟨ũ⟩ [e :], but it can have some other unknown use.
3. In older texts, the alphabet did not use letters Ъ ъ and Э э. Instead of Tajik ъ, Yaghnobi ʉ and e covered both Tajik e and ə for /e/. Later, the letters were integrated into the alphabet so the older етк was changed into этк to represent the pronunciation [ʉ e : tkʰ] (and not *[ʉʰ je : tkʰ]). Older шаʼмак was changed to шаъмак [ʃ ʃ aʃʰ mak].
4. /je/ and /ji/ are written e and u. Yaghnobi u can be ji/* after a vowel like in Tajik, and ѣ after a vowel is ji/*. Also, e has two values: word-initially and after a vowel, it is pronounced [je :], but after a consonant, it is [e :]. /je/ is rare in Yaghnobi and is only in Tajik or Russian loans, the only example for /je/ is Европа [ʉʰ je : vrɔpa], a Russian loanword.
5. Russian letters Ц ц, Щ щ, Ы ы and Ь ь, which can be used in Tajik loans from Russian, are not used in Yaghnobi. They are written as they are pronounced by the Yaghnobi speakers, not as they are written originally in Russian: aeroplane is самолет/самолёт in Russian, written самолёт in Tajik and pronounced [səmeʰ lʰ ɔtʰ] in Russian and in Tajik. In Yaghnobi, it is written as самалиёт and follows the Yaghnobi pronunciation [səmalɪʰ jo : tʰ] or [səmajlʰ o : tʰ]. The word concert is borrowed from Russian концерт [kenʰ tsɛrtʰ] in the form канцерт [kʰanʰ se : rtʰ]). Compare with Tajik концерт.
6. According to Sayfiddīn Mīrzoʒoda, the distinction between sounds /v/ and /w/ needs to be established. For /v/, ʋ is used, but for /w/, another letter should be adopted. W w would be the best choice. For /xʷ/, Xw xw should be used. Mīrzoʒoda uses w in some texts, but it is inconsistent.

Phonology

Yaghnobi includes 9 monophthongs (3 short, 6 long), 8 diphthongs, and 27 consonants.

Vowels

	Front		Back
	short	long	short	long
Close	ɪ	i : y :	ʊ	u :
Mid		ɛ :		ɔ :
Open	a	ɑ :

The diphthongs in Yaghnobi are /aĩ, ɔ : ĩ, ʊ ĩ, u : ĩ, y : ĩ, ɪ ĩ, ɔ : ʊ, aʊ/. /aĩ/ only appears in native words in the western dialects, eastern dialects have /ɛ : / in its place, except in loanwords.

- The monophthongs have these allophonic variants:
 - /ɪ/: [ĩ~ɪ~e]
 - /a/: [(æ~)a(~ɑ)]
 - /ʊ/: [(y~)ʊ~ʊ~o]
 - /i/: [ĩ :]
 - /ɛ :/: [ɛ : ~e :]
 - /ɑ :/: [(a : ~)ɑ :]
 - /ɔ :/: [(ɔ : ~)ɔ : (~o : ~u :)]
 - /u :/: [u :]
 - /y :/: [(u : ~)y : (~ĩ :)]
- /ɑ : / was the result of compensatory lengthening (/dʒɑ : m < dʒaʃm < dʒamʃ/).
- In recent loans from Tajik [e :] and/or Uzbek [e, ø] can also appear, but its pronunciation usually merges to /u : /.
- /y : / is only recognised by some authorities. It seems that it is an allophone of /u : /, originating from historical stressed ū*, but historical ō*, changed in Yaghnobi to ū, remains unchanged. It seems that /y : / is unstable, and it is not recorded in all varieties of Yaghnobi. It is often realised as [u : (j)], u : ĩ, ʊ ĩ, ʊ ĩ], as well as /y : /. By summary: ū* (under stress) > ū/ūy/uy/γ or ū, ō* > ū (вʉз [vy : z~vu : z] "goat"; Tajik: бʉз, Avestan: 𐬨𐬀𐬭𐬀).
- Before a nasal, /ɔ : / can change to /u : /, e.g. Тоҷикистун [tɔ : dʒɪkɪsʰ tɔ : n~tɔ : dʒɪkɪsʰ tu : n] "Tajikistan", ным [nɔ : m~nu : m] "name".
- /ɛ : / is considered as a long vowel, however before /h, ʃ/, its pronunciation is somewhat shorter, and is realised as a half-short (or even short) vowel. Etymologically, the "short" e before /h, ʃ/ comes from older i* (there is an alternation e/i before /h, ʃ/) if the historical cluster ih* or iʃ* appears in a closed syllable, and i* changes to e. In open syllables, the change did not take place (that is similar to Tajik). The change can be seen in the verb dih-/deh-: infinitive [ʰ dɪhak] vs. 3rd sg. present [ʰ dɛ(ʰ)htʃɪ].
- In Yaghnobi dialects, there can be seen a different development of historical svarabhakti vowel: in the Western and Transitional dialects, it is rendered as /ɪ/ (or /ʊ/ under certain circumstances), but in the Eastern dialects it changes to /a/ (but also /ɪ/ or /ʊ/): θray* > θəráy* > W.Tr. tiráy vs. E. saráy but βrāt* > vərát* > W.Tr./E. virót.
When the second vowel is a back vowel, ə* usually changes to /ʊ/ in Western or Transitional dialects: č(ə)θβār* > tʃār* > təfór* > W.Tr. tufór (but also tifór) vs. E. táfór, pδūfs-* > bədúfs* > W.Tr./E. budúfs-. The later change appears also in morphology: verb tifárak (the form is same in all three dialects) has form in 3rd sg. present tufórči < təfár-* < tfar-* < θβar-*. The alternation /ɪ~a/ can be seen also in Tajik loans where an unstressed vowel can undergo this change: W./Tr. širĭk vs. E. šarĭk < Tajik шарик /š^arik/ "partner", W./Tr. xipár vs. E. xapár < Tajik хабар /x^abar/ "news". The former svarabhakti vowels are often ultra-short or reduced in pronunciation, and they can even disappear in fast speech: xišáp vs. xⁱšáp vs. xšap / < *xəšáp < *xšap.

- The /a/ changes to /ɔ : / in verbal stems of type -Car- if an ending containing historic *θ or *t is added: tifár-, infinitive tifarak, 1st sg. present tifarómišt but 3rd sg. present tufórči (ending -či comes from older -tišt), 2nd pl. present W./Tr. tufórtišt E. tufórsišt, x°ar-: x°arak : x°arómišt : xórci : xórtišt/xórsišt (when /a/ changes to /ɔ : / after /x°w/, /x/ loses its labilisation). The change takes place with all verbs of Yaghnobi origin and also with older loans from Tajik. For new loans, a remains unchanged.: gudár(ak) : gudórči vs. pár(ak) : párči: the first verb is an old loan from Tajik guzaštan < guḏaštan, the later a recent loan from parrīdan.

Consonants

	Bilabial	Labio-dental	Alveolar	Post-alveolar/palatal	Velar	Uvular/labialised uvular	Pharyngeal	Glottal
Nasal	m		n
Plosive	p b		t d	(c ɟ)	k g	q
Affricate				tʃ dʒ
Fricative		f v	s z	ʃ ʒ ʒʲ		χ χʷ	ħ	ʕ
Approximant	β			j		ʁ		h
Trill			r
Lateral approximant			l

- /k/ and /g/ are palatalised to [c] and [ɟ] respectively before a front vowel or after a front vowel word-finally.
- [h] appears as an allophone between vowels or voiced consonants.
- /m/, /n/ both have allophones /ŋ/ and /ɱ/ before /k, g/ and /f, v/, respectively
- All voiced consonants are pronounced voiceless at the end of the word when after an unvoiced consonant comes a voiced one. Likewise, unvoiced consonants become voiced by assimilation. In voicing q, the voiced opposition is [ʁ], not [g].
- The consonants /b/, /g/, /h/, /ħ/, /dʒ/, /q/, /l/, /ʃ/ appear mostly in loanwords, native words with those sounds are rare and mostly onomatopoeic.

Morphology

W, E and Tr. refer to the Western, Eastern and Transitional dialects.

Verb

Personal endings – present:

Person	Singular	Plural
1st	-omišt	-īmišt
2nd	-īšt	-tišt (W, Tr.), -sišt (E)
3rd	-tišt (W), -či (E, Tr.)	-ošt

Personal endings – preterite (with augment a-):

Person	Singular	Plural
1st	a- -im	a- -om (W), a- -īm (E, Tr.)
2nd	a- -ī	a- -ti (W, Tr.), a- -si (E)
3rd	a- –	a- -or

By adding the ending -išt (-št after a vowel; but -or+išt > -ošt) to the preterite, the durative preterite is formed.

The present participle is formed by adding -na to the verbal stem. Past participle (or perfect participle) is formed by addition of -ta to the stem.

The infinitive is formed by addition of ending -ak to the verbal stem.

Negation is formed by prefix na-, in combination with augment in preterite it changes to nē-.

The copula is this:

Person	Singular	Plural
1st	īm	om
2nd	išt	ot (W, Tr.), os (E)
3rd	ast, -x, xast, ásti, xásti	or

Lexicon

Knowledge of Yagnobi lexicon comes from three main works: from a Yagnobi-Russian dictionary presented in Yagnobi Texts by Andreyev and Peščereva and then from a supplementary word list presented in Yagnobi Grammar by Xromov. The last work is Yagnobi-Tajik Dictionary compiled by Xromov's student, Sayfiddīn Mīrzozoda, himself a Yagnobi native speaker. Yagnobi Tajik words represent the majority of the lexicon (some 60%), followed by words of Turkic origin (up to 5%, mainly from Uzbek) and a few Russian words (about 2%; through the Russian language, also many international words came to Yagnobi). Only a third of the lexicon is of Eastern-Iranian origin and can be easily comparable to those known from Sogdian, Ossetian, the Pamir languages or Pashto.
